Elon Musk's armed security guards were deputized as federal agents during his time in the Trump administration despite a lack of "basic law enforcement training," according to a new report.

Members of Musk's private security team were "deputized as federal agents" last year, allowing them to carry firearms in certain federal buildings, despite some of the guards failing to meet "what the Marshals Service considered to be the basic requirements to be deputized as federal law enforcement," according to
